- (58) Field of search: Consent/Authorization management systems
- (57) Abstract:

Individuals or businesses signing up for consent-required services are first informed of the necessity to provide consent. Subsequently, they are prompted to furnish basic KYC information such as Full Name, National Identity Number, and phone number. The Electronic consent Platform then initiates a request to the Telecommunications Regulatory Authority or the Mobile Network Operator to verify whether the provided customer phone number is registered under the same customer's National Identity Number. Responses from either entity are categorized as YES or NO. In the event of a NO response, the Electronic Consent Platform notifies the service provider of the mismatched customer KYC. Conversely, a YES response triggers the Electronic Consent Platform to dispatch a consent-ID to the customer's phone number via SHORT MESSAGE SERVICE (SMS), detailing the service provider's request and providing instructions for granting or revoking consent through a specified Unstructured Supplementary Service Data code. Upon the customer's action, the Electronic Consent Platform updates the consent status as either granted or revoked and informs the service provider through Application Programming Interface (API) integration. Subsequently, the service provider, armed with a consent ID, seeks specific data from a data collector, which could be a Government Agency or Private Organization. The Data collector verifies the consent ID's validity and status through the Electronic Consent Platform. If the status is Rejected or Revoked, the data collector refrains from sharing the requested data; if granted, the specific data requested is shared with the service provider. With the acquired data, the service provider delivers the requested service to the customer. Finally, the Electronic Consent Platform generates a consent form documenting the customer's approval for the service provider to access, use, and process their data for the specified service. The Electronic Consent platform functions as an API-to-API integration and as a web Application interface that can be accessed online by service providers that may not wish to use the API-to-API integration.
